The last section of the book concentrates on the endeavours of these next generations to reestablish to Earth, a planet that has been fundamentally changed by the moon's destruction. This segment is less about sheer survival and more about the renovation of human civilization and the long process of adaptation and evolution.

Stephenson's writing is defined by its technical accuracy, its intellectual depth, and its humorous observations on human nature. While the novel is lengthy, the tempo is well-maintained, and Stephenson skillfully juggles the technical elements with the emotional stories of his figures.
