His skillful prowess is almost legendary. His signature one-handed backhand, a unusual sight in the modern game, was a weapon of unmatched precision and force. It wasn't just brute force; it was a planned blend of skill and coordination, allowing him to accomplish shots that seemed impossible to others. Think of it as a sculptor carefully molding a masterpiece, each stroke intentional and exact.

His serve was another feature of his game that distinguished him apart. Consistent and deadly, it offered him the opportunity to dictate points from the outset. It wasn't just the speed; it was the positioning, the variety of spins, and the ability to mix it up, keeping his opponents guessing and off-balance. This calculated deployment of his serve formed the base of his attacking style.

But Federer's genius wasn't solely confined to his skillful abilities. He possessed an extraordinary court sense and an instinctive understanding of his opponents' advantages and disadvantages. He was a virtuoso of planning, adjusting his game to exploit any opening and counteract any threat. This intellectual aspect of his game is often disregarded, yet it was integral to his success.
